ANCHORED ON THE 12×24 GARAGE

Living room confirmed as one L (centre + SE corner). Hallway confirmed 18×4 and redrawn OPEN. Guest bath shrunk, kitchen grown. One question left — the two doors you said face each other cannot, drawn this way.

YOUR FOUR ANSWERS, 22 SEP 8:18 AM

- ✓ “the living room takes both the center block and the south east corner” — already drawn that way and now locked. It is one L-shaped room, 318 sf, wrapping the kitchen. That was the biggest open question and it is closed.
- ✓ “the hallway is right at 18 x 4 but it’s all open” — the numbers were right, the walls were not. It is now drawn dashed: a named circulation space, not a corridor.
- ▼ “the guest bathroom can be shrunk down a little” — cut from 11×13 to 11×8 (143 → 88 sf). The 55 sf went next door to the office.
- “the kitchen, of course is much bigger” — grown east, 15×8 to 20×8 (120 → 160 sf).

⚠ ONE THING YOU SAID THAT I CANNOT DRAW — and I would rather ask than guess it wrong again.

You said the guest bedroom and office doors are straight across from each other. On this plan they cannot be: the guest bed is on the north side of the hallway and the office is off its east end. Those two doors are around a corner from each other, not facing.

For them to face, the hallway's 18 ft has to run north-south, not east-west — a 4 ft wide by 18 ft long spine with the guest bed on one side and the office on the other. Same two numbers, turned 90°.

Which is it? If it is the north-south spine, say so and I will re-cut the whole east half around it — that also changes where the guest bath and the ethernet drops land. I am not going to redraw the house off my own inference.

Why the kitchen grew east and not south: the envelope is still 44 × 32 and the total is still 1,408 sf against your recorded 1,400 — so the kitchen had to take its extra 40 sf from somewhere inside, and the only side it touches is the living room. If the kitchen is bigger than that, the outside wall has to move and the 1,408 goes with it. Tell me and I will move it.

TOTALS — REV K

- House 44 × 32 = 1,408 sf (recorded: 1,400)
- Garage 12 × 24 = 288 sf — your tape measure, still the anchor for the whole drawing
- Living room 318 · Master bed 195 · Office 176 · Kitchen 160 · Guest bed 130 · Master bath 110 · Foyer 104 · Guest bath 88 · Hallway 72 · Laundry 55
